Market Commentary

by Per Amundsen, Head of Research

At its November meeting on Melbourne Cup Day, the RBA Board held the Cash Rate steady for the time being at the record low of 0.75%. Governor Lowe had already spoken of the prospect of further easing but the quarterly SoMP will be important when it is released. The Q3 CPI came in at 0.5% with the annualised rate rising to 1.7% and Retail sales for September were weak at +0.2% and 2.5% for the year; the third quarter was actually down -0.1%. The US Fed made its widely anticipated change to rates at their October meeting but Chairman Powell's remarks appeared to signal some doubt about more cuts despite urgings from President Trump. With markets unsure about further cuts to rates by the RBA the AUD rose in late October to above USD 0.68 and is staying there for now. Our News and Views section covers the RLB Crane Index which has recently been updated and shows continued strong activity levels for residential development in Sydney and Melbourne and expanding infrastructure work. There have been a couple of changes in our ratings and trends this month. Melbourne and Sydney Residential are confirmed as Fair for Houses but with an Improving trend. Units remain Fair and Stable, in both cities, despite comments above. Retail trends remain a concern and we discussed that in more detail in our recent Quarterly Update as we do all sectors.

Market Commentary

While the nation delivered a temporary economic stimulus with Melbourne Cup festivities in full swing, the RBA met and decided to hold the cash rate at 0.75% as we begin to close in on Christmas. With the seasonally extended holiday season approaching and many among us having the benefit of the Coalition government's tax cut payments under the belt, economists and officials will be closely watching year end consumption numbers. These figures will inevitably be a factor in the RBA's decision on monetary policy calibrations coming into the first meetings of 2020 commencing in February. On a separate but related note, Governor Lowe has made mention on more than one occasion of the need for continued strength in infrastructure spending as an important catalyst in working towards brighter economic conditions. Last week I attended an industry event and was speaking with the head of a global engineering firm, discussing their current and upcoming projects, all of which are associated with state government programs. Their perspective and outlook was very positive, supported by a sizeable pipeline of work lying ahead over the next 5 years, both for their company and their peers. This ongoing advance in infrastructure spending has also been mirrored in Thinktank's year to date originations with October registering $52 million in new loans, 40% of which were for the purchase or refinance of industrial properties. Investors continue to seek sound, risk weighted yields to meet their income needs. Thinktank's Income Trust returned 4.49% p.a. in the month of October.
